MISSOULA--

A traveling exhibit of historical Indian Art entitled "Indian Pride on the Move" will be open to the public without charge Aug. 31 and Sept. 1-2 at the Nez Perce National Historic Park Headquarters, Spalding, Idaho.

The exhibit, open from 10 a.m.-9 p.m. Aug. 31 and Sept. 1-2, is being presented in various communities across the nation through December 1976 under the sponsorship of the National Park Service in cooperation with the University of Montana, Missoula. The exhibit in Spalding also is in cooperation with the Nez Perce Tribe. Richard Halfmoon is tribal chairman.

at UM,
Dr. Joel H. Bernstein, associate professor of art history / who is director of the traveling project, said the items included in the display date from about 1850 to 1925. He said the 110 historically valuable artworks in the display, which are housed in a 40-ft. trailer, were never seen in public until the exhibit was dedicated in Washington, D. C., July 12, 1976.

The traveling display is from the David T. Vernon Collection of Native American Arts. Vernon is said to have established his collection during most of his life by collecting items from the plains, woodlands and plateau regions of the U.S.

Included in the exhibit are moccasins and leggings, smoking pipes, blankets, bear claw necklaces, pouches and bags, and spoons and ladles.

Rosella Redwolf Covington, a member of the Crow Tribe from Wyola, Mont., is field supervisor for the traveling exhibit. Covington formerly was project director for the Native American Cultural Institute at UM.
